1. No air unit was stationed at the Brandenburg-Arado (N 53/2 23) airfield on 22 February 1950. Aircraft were not observed. A sentry wearing red-bordered, black epaulets and the tank badge was posted at the main guardhouse. Soldiers observed on the western edge of the field wore similar uniforms. Trails 55 centimeters wide, of track-laying vehicles were observed. The following air force vehicles were seen: [redacted] bus and passenger cars [redacted] 25X1C
[redacted] Truck [redacted] the driver wearing [redacted] 25X1C
[redacted] red-bordered, black epaulets, was also seen.

2. It was observed on 22 February 1950 between 9 and 11 a.m. that, except for three biplanes, the Brandenburg-Arado airfield was evacuated by the soviet air force.
3. No indications of an intended reoccupation of the field were observed on 23 February 1950.

comment:

It was confirmed [redacted] that the airfield is no longer occupied by an air unit. The fighter regiment previously stationed there is now in Brandenburg-Briest. The Brandenburg-Arado airfield is at present apparently occupied by an army unit. From the [redacted] it is assumed that an air force ground unit is also stationed at the field.
